Also, it was told by them that during the previous excavation, too much sand has been lifted, due to which many pits have formed at some places, due to which the villagers remain afraid of children and cattle drowning. The only means of irrigation for the villagers is a river which is connected to the canal; complaining that the ghat should not be opened |

| 4    | All the local residents present in the public hearing unanimously said that there is no sand in this sand ghat. There has been a lot of sand lifting on this ghat in the east, due to which potholes have been formed in the river at some places, due to which the villagers remain afraid of children and cattle drowning. The pan level of the river is also not equal, due to which the villagers face difficulty in irrigation. Demand was made not to open this sand ghat |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
